PEACE ON EARTH

GOOD WILL TOWARD MEN

The Scene at the Manger

HUNDREDS of tourists celebrated Christmas in the Holy Land amid familiar scriptural surroundings in 1932. On a world cruise aboard the liner Empress of Britain, they arrived in Jerusalem Christmas Eve.

Automobiles carried these tourists and pilgrims to worship at the cradle of Christ's birth at Bethlehem. Above them was a starry sky which recalled the actual night of the Nativity 1932 years ago.

Brighter, however, than all the stars was the electrically lighted cross above the Church of the Nativity which, from a distance, resembled a large star hovering above the darkly silhouetted roof-tops of Christ's town.

Thousands of worshippers had moved and prayed on the very soil where Jesus Christ breathed His first few hours on earth at the first Christmas nearly twenty centuries ago. It was to capture some precious fragment of that atmosphere that reverent pilgrims came flocking from the far ends of the kingdom He left.

At 9 o'clock Christmas eve—the Latin patriarch went into the Church of the Convent, which communicates with the Church of the Holy Nativity. The service there continued until just before midnight.

At midnight the large star above the altar was lighted by electricity, a curtain was drawn away from the altar, revealing an effigy of the Holy Babe. Then High Mass commenced.

Rich and poor, high and humble, prostrated themselves before the slow procession of clergy, headed by the patriarch in rich robes, as it made its way with the babe held aloft to the grotto of the Nativity beneath the transept.

Here the effigy was laid reverently on the manger, Mass was again held, the procession returning to the transept above.

Evening-clothed Christian residents of Jerusalem, picturesquely-attired native men and women of Bethlehem and Beit Jallah, a large Christian Arab town, rubbed shoulders in the press of humanity bound together and fascinated by the spell cast by the religious atmosphere of the ancient church.

Christmas Children's Day

December the 25th is the Day of the Child. It is upon this day of days that countless men and women and little ones barely able to speak their language utter the great rejoicing: For unto us a Child is born, unto us a Son is given! Even those who hold creeds in which there is no Christmas feel the splendor of that cry, and those who have no formal creed at all, still know there is one of the 365 portions of the year which is essentially the Day of the Child.

It is the day when even the most unsentimental adult, long since congealed and hardened by the years, can hear in his heart the footsteps of the little ones. Today they are running about so eagerly all over the world patterning to see what good gifts may have been received, ardent with a hope that only young hearts can feel.

On this day the austere scientist who has almost quit believing in the very laws of astronomy which recently seemed so sure and stable, but which now seem dissolving in a mist of relativity—this careful professional skeptic becomes as a child himself, and considers it hard indeed if he cannot believe in Santa Claus, bearded fairy god-father of the children.

On this day even those who have been the most careless feel like saying over reverently that beautiful prayer for wisdom in the rearing of children:

"Almighty God, heavenly Father, who has blessed us with the joy and care of children; Give us light and strength so to train them, that they may love whatsoever things are true and pure and lovely and, of good report."

For on this Day of the Child we all remember that the most precious gift we can bestow upon our children is a capacity for feeling just such tender and generous and helpful emotions as today stir in the breasts of all good men and women.—Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

Origin of Carols

The origin of the Christmas carol is lost in the mists of medieval times. The institution of Christmas had been more clearly established. In the Middle Ages, and farther back, "carol" meant something more than a mere part-song to be sung on Christmas Eve and at Christmas dawn. The word in Italian, carola, means ballad-dancer. Long ago a ballad dance was performed by a number of young folks taking hands, forming a ring and singing as they danced. Many one-time famous carols have been lost, both words and music. England is the home of the carol. In France there is little of it since the war. What there is confined largely to remote rural villages.

People Who Made Christmas Customs

JAMES I. was not a very popular king, and is chiefly remembered for his hatred of tobacco. But there is one thing in his favor. It was he who made turkey a popular Christmas dish.

In those days the boar's head was the Christmas joint, but James hated pork as savagely as he did tobacco, so his cooks substituted turkey and the bird never fell out of favor.

Talking of turkey, it was the Jesuits who first imported the bird from America. They reared turkeys on a large farm near Bourges, in France, and from there they spread all over Europe.

What a pity it is we don't know who invented the mince pie. All we do know is that they were originally made in the shape of the manger in which the Christ-Child was laid and that they were known as "coffin" pasties.

But perhaps the mince pie grew like the plum pudding which, in its earliest state, was nothing but a sort of porridge with plums in it. Our ancestors ate it for breakfast.

A king popularized the turkey and a queen introduced the Christmas tree. It was Charlotte, consort of George III., who brought the first one to London.

Oddly enough, the fashion did not take on, and it was not until about 1840 that the Christmas tree was again seen. It was then re-introduced by the Prince Consort who, by the way, became engaged to Queen Victoria on the morning of Christmas Day, 1838.

No one knows who wrote the first Christmas carol, but we do know that the first book of carols was published by Wynkenyde Worde, who was a pupil of the famous Caxton.

Many will tell you that he owes the merit of Christmas to Charles Dickens. No one in their senses is going to deny that Dickens did in this way, but we ought not to forget the other writers who made popular Christmas parties and revels.

It was Addison who invented Sir Roger de Coverley, or who adapted him from Squire Newdegate or Arbury. And that worthy knight knew all about Christmas festivities.

"Christmas," he said, "is the most dead, uncomfortable time of the year. People would suffer very much from the cold, the snow, the frost, the wind, the rain, the fire, and the Christmas gambols to support them. I love to rejoice their poor hearts and to see the whole village merry in my great hall."

"I allow a double quantity of malt to my small beer and set it a-running for twelve days to everyone that calls for it. I have always a piece of cold beef and a mince pie upon the table."

Nor must we forget Sir Walter Scott, whose centenary was recently celebrated. Read "Marmion," and you will see that his motto was: "We'll keep our Christmas merry still."

Many well-known writers of the past have helped to make Christmas the jolly festival that it is today.

Who Was Father Christmas?

Santa Claus was not an imaginary figure, but a real person. He was St. Nicholas, who was archbishop of Myra, in Asia Minor, and who has always been regarded as the patron saint of children. He lived 1600 years ago, and gave a great spur to secret bounties by his delightful mode of playing the part of benefactor to the "three portless maidens."

This happened while he was yet a young man, placed by his father's death in possession of an inheritance which he resolved to distribute among the poor. He did not carry out his project haphazardly, but carefully and discreetly.

Now there was in the city a nobleman who had fallen into direct poverty, and whose three fair daughters were about to be sold as slaves to evil masters. St. Nicholas, having learned this, on three successive nights visited the house in secret, each time bringing with him a bag of gold as a dowry for one of the maidens.

Twice he contrived to leave his gift and to depart unseen. But on the third night the father kept vigil, and poured his heart out to the stranger in gratitude for the deliverance of his children, in penitence for his own lack of faith.

Three Celebrations

Three Christmases are celebrated every year in the Church of Nativity at Bethlehem. The first occurs in the Roman Catholic section on December 25; 13 days later the Greek Orthodox church hold their celebrations, to be followed by those of the Armenian church in another 13 days.

The Real Santa Claus

This Christmas spirit is the real Santa Claus—a spirit that is universal—that grows stronger with the years—that brings out the best in us—a spirit that made up of kindly thought and deeds, of hallowed memories and of "Good Will" to all.

"Campus Co-Ed" Was Delightful Presentation in Auditorium

Bright Musical Comedy Directed by Jean F Wallace Is Striking Demonstration of Ability of Local Talent

The bright haunting melodies of two outstanding performances of a wholesome and refreshing college play, "Campus Co-Ed," constitute a highlight in local theatricals which will long remain a most pleasant memory, and were a striking demonstration of the ability of Coleman's younger set.

The acting of the principals, the singing and dancing of the choruses and the general style of the presentations on Monday and Tuesday were such as to give unbounded pleasure and surprise to the audiences.

The play is built around typical college life, in which the premier honors are shared by Joan Davis (Miss Gwen Brown) the hardworking student who as cashier of the college cafeteria, works her way through college, falls in love with Howard Leslie (Mr. J. Cousins) a movie actor, and eventually substitutes as a star for Fay Daryl (Miss Edna Fairhurst) under the management of Evan Von Hoken (Mr. Sidney C. Short). Fay Daryl, while at the college to take part in a picture to be produced by Von Hoken, in which the Milford university boat race is to be featured, sustains a broken arm as she bursts in on a violent altercation between Frank Jenkins (Mr. Ray Spillers) husband of Fay, who becomes jealous of his wife's success and friendship with Howard Leslie.

Sunny Spurgin (Miss Pearl McDonald), champion of Joan, and Piggy Wright, a freshman (Mr. Reuben Johnson) are a troublesome couple of students in the eyes of Miss Lucretia Higgins (Miss Ethel Wilson) dean of the ladies' college. Sunny's charms also attract the attention of Steve, a rival (Mr. John Lloyd) who is a rival for Sunny's love. Lucretia has a warm admiration for the president of the college, Dr. Betters (Mr. Arthur E. Graham) and becomes highly indignant when he succumbs to the charms of Fay Daryl, who rewards his courtesies with a kiss in full view of the students.

Grace "Bee" Weatherly (Miss Winona Taylor) the faithful ally of Miss Higgins, most effectively portrayed the type of college busy-body of superior mind who tries to upbraid the various little love-making episodes that abound in the play, and discovering that some of her examination papers have disappeared, tries to place the blame on Joan, who has fallen in love with Howard Leslie, and who is chosen to take Fay Daryl's place in the movie at the college. Fay, finding that Joan is placed in a false position, and witnessing her tragic dismay at such a false accusation, owns up to what she stole the papers in revenge for Joan superseding her. The climax of the play comes when Dr. Betters, learning the truth from Fay's confession, decides to forgive her for wrongdoing, and awards Joan the premier honor as the outstanding student of the year.

The play ends in a colorful display of the entire ensemble in rousing college songs and cheers.

Outstanding features are the choruses and dances by the Tennis Girls, the Milford Chorus, the Rowing Crew, the Frown Chorus, the Bluebird

Last week there was omitted from the list of prize-winners the names of Miss Higginsbotham and A. Litchfield.

More Action Needed

Net profits from "Campus Co-Ed" were $80.00, divided between the director and St. Alban's church. The gross sales were $196.00, very poor, considering the high standard of the show. Lack of an active ticket selling campaign by St. Alban's church committee is partly responsible for the poor showing.

"Aunt Lucia," played under the same auspices in 1930, showed more than double the business of this week.

"Campus Co-Ed" Expenses were: Miss Wallace, contract $50.00
Hall rental 30.00
Cartage 1.00

Posters, Tickets, Window Cards, Programs and Advertising 35.00
Total 116.00

Young People Ambitious

Among the young people who took part in "Campus Co-Ed" there is quite a feeling that further activities might be engaged in along these lines, and they favor a play during 1935. There is no doubt that with an active committee to boost the ticket sale they would meet with splendid support. Such a play in aid of some local organization would meet with widespread support, and The Journal will surely aid in such proposal.

Community hall funds need a boost, and a couple of nights show concluding with a dance for the young people and committee taking part should prove worthy of popular support.

Mrs. Wheatley of Banff is the guest of her mother, Mrs. Chalmers, this week.

On Christmas Eve the girls' choir will sing carols at some of the homes in Coleman. An offering will be gratefully received to help defray cost of music. If there are any sick people or shut ins who would appreciate hearing the grand old Xmas carols, let Mr. Taylor know.

is considered by experienced advertisers as the safest way in which to get their announcements before the public. That is why national advertisers and big merchandisers, besides leading merchants in cities and towns, use recognized newspapers. They do so because undoubtedly it is good business practice, and also because newspapers render public service which no other forms of advertising give.

British Officer Is Beaten By Menacing Mob In Saar Area

Saarbrücken, Saar Territory. — Tension accompanying the approaching Saar plebiscite was increased here Sunday by the wounding of a British resident and the beating by an angry mob of a British member of the League of Nations' international police force.

A bullet from the pistol of Captain James Justice, an Englishman, struck a civilian in the stomach, according to the official version of the incident, after Justice's automobile, carrying two other men, mounted the sidewalk of a narrow street and struck a woman.

Deputy Leader Nietmann of the German Front, the Nazi organization in the Saar, called upon the Dutch member of the league government commission and requested the commission take measures "to prevent the recurrence of such incidents."

When an angry crowd gathered about him, Justice drew a pistol. The crowd closed in, menacing him, and hands reached out to seize the weapon. During the scuffle the gun went off twice, one bullet striking an electrician named Neumeister. He was not seriously injured.

The crowd, numbering about 30 persons, immediately closed in upon Justice and beat him badly. He was taken to hospital.

Neumeister was able to go home after his wound had been dressed at a pharmacy.

The official version of the incident said Justice and two companions, driving a private car, turned into a narrow street and the right wheel ran over the sidewalk, scattering groups and injuring a woman.

Justice, a captain in the police force, alighted and apologized. The woman was treated at a pharmacy. A crowd which gathered gained the impression Justice and his companions sought to leave the scene and tried to hold them by force. Justice threw up, believing he was in danger, drew his pistol and fired a warning shot. The crowd rushed him seeking to tear the pistol from his grasp, and another bullet from the revolver slightly wounded Neumeister. Justice then fell badly beaten and was taken to a hospital where he remained.

Close investigation of the incident is now progressing and Justice is officially suspended from duty.

Justice had been in Saarbrücken for several months, having been recruited with hundreds of other applicants for international police work. As far as is known he has never been in the British army. The incident was described by officials as of minor importance.

Recognizing the incident may create a bad atmosphere for the arrival of international troops and for the local international police force, the government commission announced its intention to make a thorough investigation and "the results of the inquiry which was opened immediately by the police will be communicated to the judicial authorities."

British Troops In France

Calais, France.—The first British troops to act for France since the conclusion of the Great War have landed here. The contingent, part of Great Britain's contribution to the international force for patrol of the Saar territory, was billeted in the ancient citadel awaiting the arrival of the rest of the British regiments.

Troops Of Five Nations Make Preparations To Patrol Saar Territory

Saarbrücken.—Saarbrücken, metropolis of the Saar basin territory, is now the focal point of preparations for the January 13 plebiscite.

While troops of five nations made ready to join the international force to patrol the territory, the Saar Plebiscite Commission acted to insure fair and secret balloting.

The commission issued regulations requiring that voters register and seal their ballots unaided in closed booths and that the ballots cast in each district be brought here by neutral officials to be tabulated by neutral tellers.

Meanwhile, detachments of the British contingent for the international force reached France and

Railway Legislation

So Far No Change In Policy Has Been Announced

Ottawa.—So far no steps have been taken to prepare any major railway legislation for the approaching session of parliament, it was learned here. This is taken to indicate that the government at present plans to go to the country without any important change in its railway policy.

Debate on the best method of dealing with the country's railway problems will doubtless break out in the House of Commons during the session even without any definite legislation to start.

The proposal of E. W. Beatty, president of the Canadian Pacific, for amalgamation, and Hon. W. D. Euler's plan for a unified system of ownership by a holding company, will each rally supporters. The government, those in charge think, will stand for the present scheme of co-operation, although it has made no recent announcement in the matter.

Considerable emphasis is being laid on the improved revenue showings of the Canadian Pacific and the Canadian National during this year. The Canadian National gross revenues to Dec. 7 are up about $15,000,000 and the C.P.R. around $11,000,000.

Trans-Canada Air Mail

Predicted Service Will Be In Operation By 1936

Edmonton.—Declaring that the route will be completed by the fall of 1935, K. E. Whitte, Regina, district inspector for Western Airways, stated in an interview that he expected the operation of a trans-Canada air mail service by 1936.

"While we have no definite information, we expect it by that time," he said. He declared that emergency landing areas are being built in the Rocky Mountains, while 10 fields have been hewn out in the forests of Ontario.

Mr. Whitte was accompanied here by Squadron Leader J. H. Tudhope, of the civil aviation department, Ottawa.

Quality Should Be Maintained

Advice Given To Hog Producers By Hon. F. S. Grisdale

Edmonton.—Hog producers should strive to maintain quality, especially since the margin of profit in production is small, just as in the past two or three years it meant less loss, said Hon. F. S. Grisdale, minister of agriculture, in making his first address as minister to the Alberta Provincial Swine Breeders' Association in their annual meeting, R. D. Baker, North Edmonton, was re-elected president for a second term.

Wheat Marketing Difficulty

Chicago.—Removal of wheat from the luxury class and relief from influences that restrict its use, demand would provide a far easier solution of present marketing difficulties than can be found in the policy of production and export quotas, W. Sanford Evans, M.L.A., prominent Winnipeg statistician, told members of the grain market analysts club here.

Major-General J. E. S. Brind, commander-in-chief, was en route here from London to take charge of his command.

Geneva.—The Saar basin territory international patrol force will be a highly mobile army, plans announced here disclosed.

Its equipment, an official statement said, will be designed to enable it to meet any emergency.

Rome.—Preparations went forward here for organization of Italy's contingent in the international force to patrol the Saar basin territory. The detachment, it was announced, will consist of a regiment of Grenadiers and a battalion of Carabinieri—the national police.

Seamen Lose Lives

Drama Of Bravery And Death On Stormy Atlantic

New York.—The gripping story of how eight seamen lost their lives in a drama of bravery and death on the gale-lashed north Atlantic was told over the wireless waves by a valiant Belgian skipper.

In true but striking phrases, Captain Sadie Gonthier of the S.S. Jean Jadot described the tragic climax to his attempt to rescue crew members of the distressed British freighter Usworth, which stood by lifeboat that capsized in the crashing seas.

"One big wave capsized the boat and all occupants," he wirelessed the Associated Press. "We lost two men plus six from Usworth."

His brief despatch and previous wireless messages did not disclose whether there were other casualties, but at least 20 of the Usworth's crew of approximately 30 were rescued.

The Jean Jadot had two survivors and the Southampton-bound S.S. Asclepiod, which stood by the scene of the rescue attempt and sprayed fuel oil into the mountainous waves, took off 18 others.

A gale of "hurricane force" that parted the two ships for 10 hours and shifted the Belgian's cargo, balked attempts to tow the Usworth, helpless with a smashed steering gear.

Then, with the storm still raging, 10 volunteers from the Jean Jadot put out in a boat for the British freighter.

Aboard the Usworth, seamen struggled in a tangle of wrecks, too exhausted to pull in the lines the Belgians shot them.

The lifeboat, after a terrific fight with the wind and sea, reached the side of the Usworth. But as the boat edged eight men, they swung about the cargo derricks and drifted into the path of a huge wave. All were spilled into the sea but eight of the rescuers were saved.

The Usworth was still afloat but foundering hopelessly.

Would Adjourn Law Courts

British Chief Justice Issues Threat In House Of Lords

London.—An incident unique in English history occurred in the house of lords when Lord Chief Justice Hewart, first magistrate of the United Kingdom, threatened to "suspend the courts of law."

Lord Hewart rose to oppose a clause in the bill modifying supreme court procedure which, he declared, was deliberate affront to Sir Henry Blesser, former solicitor-general.

Lord Hewart announced he would "fight the bill line for line, and, if necessary, word for word."

He stated he could not sit in the house of lords and as chief justice simultaneously he would not hostilities if the bill is not modified, to adjourn the law courts of England as long as the bill was under discussion, at risk of disrupting judicial functions, to do what he considered his duty.

Has Faith In Stevens

Miss Agnes Macphail Says Former Minister Has Won Hearts Of People

Toronto.—Miss Agnes Macphail, Canada's only woman member of parliament, told the United Farmers of Ontario that if Hon. H. H. Stevens, or Hon. W. D. Euler, would take an independent position on some progressive measure "there would be nothing to prevent her, if elected, from working with them."

Miss Macphail, substituting for Mr. Stevens, who was scheduled to speak at the U.F.O. convention, said there was nothing to prevent her from working with them "even if they were going in her direction, even if they were going only part way."

She believed Mr. Euler, former Liberal minister of national revenue, was the most courageous member of the opposition, but her address was concerned more with the position of Mr. Stevens.

"The Hon. H. H. Stevens has won the hearts of the people in Canada, and certainly the hearts of the farmers," Miss Macphail said. "He has won their hearts' cause of his willingness to work for the inarticulate masses, to use his own phrase, and because of his willingness to make a real personal sacrifice to do these things. Such willingness in high places is so rare in Canada it leaves us gasping."

Good Christmas Trade

Toronto.—Jewelers, furriers, candlestick makers and radio dealers, all merchants whose trade is representative of trends, affirmed here that advance Christmas retail buying indicated prosperity was well on its way in. Sales were definitely up over those of last year, and customers were asking for the better-quality and higher-priced merchandise, store managers said.

The device, made by Bert Grummett, a piano mover, will be drawn to the attention of the Canadian Bankers' Association by the Saskatoon branch of Trade.

Traffickers In Armaments

Empire-Wide Investigations Into Operations Is Advocated

Ottawa.—Empire-wide investigations into the operations of manufacturers and traffickers in armaments should be urged to the limit by Canadian Liberals, Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Dominion leader, told the National Liberal Federation.

This investigation should include the sea by Canada and other parts of the British Empire of essential war materials. "With a view to the ultimate control of the supply and sale of munitions of war by the League of Nations or some other effective international agency."

Commented with Mr. King suggested that Canada take the lead in declaring definitely "not only that it will give no succor to any nation which wantonly disturbs the world's peace but that it will provide neither arms nor foodstuffs nor credits to such a nation."

"I believe," asserted Mr. King, "that a declaration of policy of the kind by the government of Canada would not only be right in itself, but would win for this country friends among all the peace-loving nations of the world and would serve to open the door to broad general negotiations which would harmonize and protect their mutual interests."

He was not one of those who believed that early war in Europe was inevitable, nor did he believe responsible rulers in Europe wished for war, but it was now generally recognized that some act of violence might precipitate the most serious of crises.

Nine Face Firing Squad

Soviets Have Executed 75 Since Assassination Of Kiroff

Minsk, U.S.S.R.—Nine alleged counter-revolutionists faced a firing squad shortly after they were convicted of terrorism.

The sentences, imposed by the Soviet military commission of the Soviet Republic, brought to 75 the number of condemned since the assassination of Sergei Kiroff, December 1, started sweeping investigations of counter-revolutionary operations.

To Develop Dairying

Edmonton, Alta.—Time has arrived for cattlemen to study zoning so that dairying may be developed near the cities where there is a favorable market and the raising of Alberta's pre-eminent, beef cattle preserved and extended to other regions better adapted to cattle raising. This idea was advanced by J. R. Sweeney, provincial dairy commissioner, in addressing the annual meeting of the Alberta Provincial Cattle Breeders here.

Chain Store Wages And Weights Probed Before Mass Buying Commission

Ottawa.—The record of the chain stores on wages and weights was stressed before the parliamentary mass buying commission during the examination of J. G. Johnston, secretary of the Canadian Chain Store Association.

Johnston agreed with several members of the commission that chain stores paid low wages but he would not agree this was attributable to the system of making a low percentage of profit on a high turnover of merchandise. He said the chains hoped to increase wages as soon as the grip of the depression was lessened although he contended they paid higher averages than independent merchants.

The association secretary claimed the chain system did not force store managers to cheat customers. He gave the commission of two or three tests made by him in Toronto where packages were bought in chain and independent stores. In each, the record of the chains was better than the independents.

The association secretary argued the chains had not forced competent independent merchants out of business, quoting the number of bankruptcies in Canada in support.

"What has happened to them," asked J. L. Halsey, Lib., Hants-Kings.

London.—Many of Argentina's objections to the London international wheat agreement are reasonable, the Financial News said in expressing uneasiness as to the fate of the accord.

"The London wheat agreement," the editorial said "is in imminent danger of collapse. It has proved so far only an instrument whereby some limitation on the acreage of major exporters could be imposed."

"Now it is impossible to say whether Argentina wishes on any conditions to preserve that agreement, or if she has other desires."

"The agreement tends to stabilize acreage at the present level which, in effect, means that Canada, the United States and Australia are permitted to hold on to gains achieved in the post-war period, while Argentina is debared from continuing the process of expansion which she has only just begun."

"Moreover, Argentina may well be alarmed at the United States' ambition to come back as a major wheat exporter. Such an action would only be economically justifiable if the States were severely to modify their tariff policy toward industrial imports. She shows no signs of doing this."

Central Bank Directors

Selection To Be Made At Annual Meeting On Jan. 23

Ottawa.—A slate of 68 names from which shareholders of the Bank of Canada are to select seven directors at the first annual meeting on Jan. 23 will be circulated among all holders of central bank stock as soon as possible. Following a meeting of the provisional directors the list of those whose nominations proved satisfactory was made public here.

Representative of all provinces except Prince Edward Island, the list contains the name of only one woman, the wife of Senator James Murdock of Ottawa. Nominations closed Dec. 5.

Ontario and Quebec head the list with 28 and 19 nominees respectively. Manitoba and British Columbia each nominated five candidates and there were three each from Alberta, Saskatchewan, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

Recommendations require the selection of two directors representative of primary industry (class A), two representative of commerce and manufacturing (class B), and three from any class of industry (class C).

Further Search Futile

Honolulu.—The United States navy is convinced further search for Capt. Charles T. P. Um and his two companions is futile, and "with profound regret" has discontinued the hunt. Rear Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, district naval commandant, announced.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

WITH the rush that always precedes Christmas, it is difficult to compile a Christmas message, especially when in addition to trying to keep up with one's daily work, other activities of a community nature occupy considerable time.

HOWEVER, there are bright things to look forward to, and though we may have thought the same as the close of last season approached, and some may claim that conditions have not appreciably improved, the majority of people have accustomed themselves to a more restricted mode of living, with less frills and more attention to the essential things of life.

THERE is without question happiness to be obtained, and though adversity is difficult to bear, yet it makes people treasure the brighter spots in life's experiences. Happiness is not obtained by drifting with the stream, but by overcoming obstacles. Many thoughts come to mind at Christmas, particularly those in connection with Dickens, the writer who found his way into the hearts of men by depicting the conversion of the hard-hearted Scrooge to the spirit of Christmas.

IN the daily struggle men's hearts tend to become hardened, and the Christmas spirit is lost sight of, possibly to be renewed for a few days each year as the anniversary of Christ's birthday is observed. Life has been described as a cross, with man's thoughts turning to higher things, and his feet tending to drag him from high ideals, while on either hand conflicting interests and emotions tend to divert him from fulfilling the things which his conscience tells him he should do, even to the extent of personal sacrifice and worldly influence.

BUT words alone do not mean very much, as some who read this may have already expressed in their minds. It is actions which really count; and they do not require to be advertised or broadcasted to do the most good. The humble worker who quietly helps his next door neighbor, who knows of a family where a little assistance would make it a happier Christmas, who without letting his right hand know what the left is doing just quietly puts his kind impulse into action, is performing equally as praiseworthy an act as those whose lavish gifts attract widespread attention.

THROUGHOUT the year The Journal has endeavored to reflect community life and to encourage the development of a sense of civic responsibility. Many things of a worthwhile nature it would have liked to do, but with a restricted field and also restricted revenue there is a limit to one's actions, no matter how willing the spirit may be.

IT is by co-operation, by the encouraging of everything that makes for a better community life, by giving something of ourselves and our time that we make a place better for having lived in it, and by carrying the Christmas spirit in our hearts throughout the year we may make the whole year brighter and happier. A Merry Christmas.

YOU may have the finest goods in the world, but aggressive selling is required to distribute them.

COLEMAN young people presented as fine a play as ever seen locally. Their performances merited two packed houses, but—those responsible for the ticket campaign left it more or less to chance, with the result that instead of being the financial success that it was from the stage and entertainment point of view, the show was fortunate in covering expenses.

TAKING things for granted instead of working towards a definite objective is responsible for mediocre achievement or next to failure.

HOWEVER, one cannot give too much praise for those who took part in the show and Miss Wallace, the director. Their lively enthusiasm, their singing and dancing and above all the inspiration these young people bring to older and staid minds is indeed refreshing. It indicates that qualified leadership brings out the best in them—latent talent is discovered which is surprising. One quarter the enthusiasm shown by the older people in boosting the efforts of the younger people would have put the show over the top good and plenty.

MACLEOD throws a monkey wrench into the Crow hockey league schedule by withdrawing their membership after two crossword puzzle sessions by the league executive to accommodate all teams from "The Hat" to Coleman. A lame duck excuse comes that they cannot see sufficient revenue for themselves under the dates arranged. It's enough to make President Barnes and Secretary Creegan say some harsh words about club executives who apparently are as temperamental as the winds that blow.

MISCELLANEOUS

The ladies of St. Alban's church held a very successful bazaar last Saturday in the parish hall, concluding in the evening with a whist drive, which saw 18 tables in play. As a result the funds, it is reported, are added to by a substantial sum, and the ladies appreciate the support accorded their efforts.

The following correction appeared in a small town paper:

"Our paper carried a notice last week that Mr. John Doe is a detective on the police force. This was a typographical error. Mr. Doe is really a detective on the police force."

Jones was at a house party. He was shy and could never summon up enough courage to speak because of his inability to say something neat. All the evening he had been trying to think of something nice to say to his hostess. At last he thought he saw his chance.

"What a small appetite you have, Mr. Jones," said his charming hostess with a smile.

"To sit next to you," he replied gallantly, "would cause any man to lose his appetite."

Poor Santa!

Doctor: What do you want Santa Claus to bring you Bobbie?
Four-year-old Bobbie: Mamma Said Santa Claus was poor this Christmas and couldn't bring much, so I wrote him a letter and put a nickel in it.

Counsel: "Now, sir, did you, or did you not, on the date in question, or at any time, previously or subsequently, say or even intimate to the defendant or anyone else, whether friend or mere acquaintance, or in fact, a stranger, that the statement imputed to you, whether just or unjust, and denied by the plaintiff, was a matter of no moment or otherwise? Answer, did you or did you not?"
Defendant: "Did I or did I not what?"

Keeping in Practice

"What's become of that hit-and-run driver?"
"He's now doing his stunt on the prison baseball team."

Costly Love

Herbert: She says she thinks she can learn to love me.

Albert: Well that seems encouraging—and still you don't look happy.

Herbert: No, I took her out last night and the first lesson cost me my whole week's wages.

Lady Ben Turpin

The movie manager was furious. "What's the matter?" asked his assistant. "Is there anything wrong?" "Why you've advertised for next week: Smiling Eyes—with a strong cast!"

The King and Queen of England saw their first boxing match last Monday when attending the annual matinee in aid of King George's pension fund for actors.

"I know what's passing in your mind," said the maiden of astute methods to the young swain. "I know, too, why you are calling here night after night, appropriating my time to yourself and keeping other nice young men away. You want to marry me, don't you?"

"I do!" gasped the astonished young man.

"I thought so. Very well, I will."

For Charity

He (awkward dancer): "It was nice of you to give me this dance."
She (sweetly): "Not at all—this is a charity ball."—Exchange.

Rare!

Young Knut: "I say, waitah, never bring me a steak like this again."
Waiter: "Why not, sir?"
Young Knut: "It simply isn't done, old thing!"—Transmitter.

Salt Mines Of Poland

Men Who Toiled In Shafts Were Deeply Religious

Visitors to Poland return greatly impressed with the salt mines. For more than ten centuries miners toiled in the salt shafts of Poland, and being deeply religious, they spent their spare time in carving marvelous figures in salt. A complete cathedral, containing giant chandeliers, beautiful statues of the saints, altars and other Biblical figures and objects, is an example of the workers' skill. On feast days of modern times, Mass is held in the underground cathedral. Among the statues is that of the Virgin. In one part of the mine a giant statue and a beautiful hall appear, monuments to the devotion of the miners.

Buffalo Hides For Eskimos

Felts From Walnwright Are Going To Arctic Dwellers

Eskimos along the bleak coast of Hudson's Bay will shortly blossom out in buffalo coats similar to those the Mounted Police wear. Meats from the same Monarchs of the Plains will be fed to workers in Federal relief camps.

The department of the interior will rush 500 "green" buffalo hides from the winter slaughter at the National Park, Walnwright, to Fort Churchill for distribution. This innovation for the Arctic dwellers followed reports of suffering among Canada's wards due to a scarcity of caribou.

The buffalo hides will be cured and dressed by the Eskimos for clothing and bedding.

Justice For Indian

B.C. Government Awards $350 For Prosecution Wrongly Laid

An Indian from Kyoquo, B.C., unjustly fined in 1931 for possession of a sea-otter pelt, has been awarded $350 compensation by the British Columbia government for the confiscated skin, injury to his reputation and reimbursement of the fine.

The Indian, Dominic Peter, was assessed $25, fine and costs, and the pelt was confiscated when he was arrested by a game guard three years ago. It developed, however, the prosecution was wrongly laid as the game act does not apply to Indians hunting on their reserve.

Chinese Quarrel With Gods

Behold One Which Has Failed To Supply Rain

The Chinese people are quarreling with their gods, and one of the chief of them—the Dragon god, whose function it is to provide rain has been beheaded. At Jenchu in Looan province, the villagers carried from the temple the image of the Dragon god and forced the magistrate against his will to conduct prayers for rain in front of it. The magistrate did so on condition that the god should remain there, for seven days and if even then no rain fell he would allow the beheading of the image. No rain fell in the succeeding week and the magistrate allowed three days more of grace. But to no avail. He then ordered out a firing squad and they shot off the head of the gaudily painted deity. Even this brought no rain, so the farmers decided to stop all prayers to their gods. And they are now being threatened by a famine.

First "Czar" Of Russia

Ivan The Terrible Was Greatly Feared By People

The British Museum has a rare portrait of Ivan the Terrible. He lived in the time of Elizabeth and was the first ruler of Russia to take the title of "czar," a corruption of Caesar. His deeds were so infamous that for centuries after his death Russians crossed themselves at mention of his name. He proposed by letter to Queen Elizabeth for the hand of an English woman, but at the moment the woman was afraid to go into exile in Russia. Ivan then married a Russian princess, who executed some check on his cruelty. But after her death he gave full rein to his unbridled passion. He passed his last days surrounded by magicians, who could not, however, exorcise the ghost of his son, whom Ivan had slain.

Colored Films

Latest Developments In Color Photography Shown In London

Britain is likely to go in for colored films on an extensive scale. It was indicated in London following the showing of latest developments in color photography.

The newest process is known as dufaycolor and the first film of three reels showed ladies' dresses of the most delicate hues and revealed subtle shading such as has not hitherto been attained on the British screen.

Dufaycolor was said to be the first step from the experimental stage towards the permanent production of all color talking pictures. A factory is to be erected shortly at Wembley, Middlesex, it was reported, for the manufacture of 2,500,000 feet of color film per week.

Anti-Aircraft Weapon

Swedish factories have perfected a new high-powered anti-aircraft gun which has been demonstrated successfully to the general staff of the army. The gun is of 40-millimeter (about 1 1/2 inches) calibre, draws 135 shots per minute, has a range of 25,000 feet and can be placed in position within three seconds.

The climate of the whole of Lapland is very severe for nine months in the year.

THE SNAPSHOT GUILD

More About Photo-Greetings

(Left)—"The family is on the march to greet you." That, or something of the sort, serves to complete a greeting like this, made in the easy silhouette manner. [Right]—A little "fifteen cent store" reindeer made of glass, a toy Christmas tree and some sugar—that's all this table-top Christmas scene required.

A week or so ago we talked about snapshot Christmas cards, but no one short discussion could possibly cover the subject adequately. A book could be written about it—but not by us. Instead we'll devote to-day's space to it.

As we said before, the most important factor in the success of a photo-greeting is an idea—an easily understood, cheerful idea, worked out in terms of a simple picture.

The subjects referred to in our first talk of Christmas cards were deliberately selected from among the more obvious ones—families, holiday wreaths, winter scenes of the home, and so on. Obvious though they are, any of them is capable of fresh, new interpretation—as individual as your own personality.

And, as you become more familiar with your camera and its possibilities, you'll discover many different approaches to any one idea. You can use, for example, story-telling silhouettes to give novel twists to otherwise "ordinary" picture ideas. A good silhouette can be made of a young lady hanging up a bit of mistletoe, or of a little boy reaching for a Christmas tree ornament. Silhouettes, as you recall, are made with the help of a sheet, a doorway and a strong light.

Table-top photography (discussed recently) has endless Christmas possibilities. A little figure of Santa Claus, some white cotton sprinkled with sugar for snow—and you've got the foundation for a variety of good pictures.

You'll find plenty of Christmas materials—little reindeer, gnomes, sleighs, bells and a hundred other reasonable "props" in any "five, ten and fifteen cent" store. But guard against over-elaborate set-ups. The simpler the better.

Whatever you do, be careful to keep it in key with your own personality. If you are musical, a glimpse of your hands on the piano keyboard plus the score for a Christmas carol on the rack, would be much more appropriate than, say, a shot of your snow-covered home. Or, a pose with your head tilted, singing, if you find you look well that way.

A baby in the family, of course, offers plenty of opportunity for greeting snapshots. In this is the baby's first Christmas, so much the better. A semi-close-up of mother and dad, indoors or out, with the baby perched on daddy's shoulder and all three waving cheerfully at the camera, should make a greeting more than ordinary charm.

For now scenes in bright sunlight, remember to use a very small lens aperture. Otherwise, the intense brilliance of the scene will give you an over-exposed negative.

JOHN VAN GUILDER.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON Making Round-World Review

DECEMBER 23

THE CHRISTIAN HOME (Christmas Lesson)

Golden text: Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace among men in whom he is well pleased. Luke 2:14.
Lesson: Luke 2:8-19.
Devotional Reading: Deuteronomy 4:9-14.

Explanations And Comments

The Good Tidings, Luke 2:8-14. Luke's beautiful story of the Nativity says that the shepherds kept watch by night over their flocks in the field an angel appeared, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them, and they were sore afraid. "We should not be far astray in taking words, 'And the glory of the Lord shone round about them,' as the key passage of Luke's Gospel. The way he has set forth Jesus, radiant and beautiful, the wondrous Lord in lonely surroundings and in the common ways of our life, in page after page of his matchless story, helps to this conclusion. We follow him gladly as he unfolds the story, sensing that he, the writer, sees the whole world gathered round the cradle of Bethlehem. The historic past to his idea has reached its consummation when he writes and for all the years, particularly of his own people, are realized in this coming of a Saviour, Christ the Lord. From the tale of this wondrous event to the end of the last immortal line this evangelist wrote down for us, we find ourselves humming the old triumphant refrain, 'And the glory, the glory of the Lord shall be revealed.' (Arthur W. Browning.)

"Be not afraid; for behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy which shall be to all the people," is the angel's message. And what was the good tidings which sings its way into our heart at every Christmas season? "The first-born to you this day in the city of David a Saviour, who is Christ the Lord."

A Glimpse of a Lowly Home and Sacred Family Life, Luke 2:15-18. The vision faded the shepherds resolved to go to Bethlehem and see the babe. "They went in haste and found Mary and Joseph, and the babe lying in the manger. Before the manger stood the babe, and artists, poets, and musicians have had their imaginations fired, their thoughts ennobled, their genius inspired. Here we too, may pause in reverent awe and glad rejoicing.

The shepherds told what they had heard to the wonderment of all who heard and pondered their words in her heart.

Problems of the Christian Home. Ephesians 6:1-4. "Children," wrote Paul, "obey your parents in the Lord, in the spirit of Christ: for this is right." And then he repeated the fifth commandment. Honor thy father and mother, commenting that it is the first (and only) commandment which carries with it a suggestion of reward in that it adds, "that may be well with thee, and thou mayest live long on the earth."

Parents must be worthy of the obedience required of children, hence Paul turned in thought to the fathers and wrote: "And ye fathers, provoke not your children to wrath." "As for you fathers, do not exasperate your children," (Moffatt's translation). By your harshness or conduct do not tempt them to rebel.

Little Journeys In Science

SOILS

(By Gordon H. Guest, M.A.)

All soil comes originally from decomposed rock, and a geologist can, by examining a soil, tell from which rock it is derived. Clay, sand, and loam are the three chief kinds of soil. It is naturally light in color, but decayed animal or vegetable matter makes it dark, while the presence of compounds of iron will give it red or yellow tinge.

Peat is the commonest of all rocks, and we are told that it is fortunate for man that this is so, for it contains certain chemicals upon which life depends. In common fields are found the oxides of alumina, silica and potash, all of which are important to animal and vegetable life.

The sand in soil comes from decomposed granite, which is derived from granite. Contrary to popular belief, granite is not immune to the processes of nature; and in time it breaks down into quartz and feldspar, which in turn become sand and clay. Loam is a mixture of sand and clay.

Rocks are made into soil by the action of the oxygen in the air, and by the chemicals carried by water, which transform the solid materials in the rocks into a form in which they can be used by the plants.

The process of formation can be seen in the case of a hill which has been excavated. On the lowest level is the hard bed-rock. Above where the air and water have penetrated the rock is slightly decomposed. Then comes the subsoil, in which there are small pieces of rock and particles of sand and clay. On the surface is the top soil in which we find the decomposed animal and vegetable matter.

Baden-Powell Will Cross Canada Early Next Summer

Best known to the present generation as founder and chief of the Boy Scouts and founder of the Girl Guides, Lord Baden-Powell of Gilwell will arrive at Victoria, B.C., on April 8 next to cross Canada in the course of his round-the-world tour of these organizations and inspection of their many activities.

Lady Baden-Powell, who heads the girls' branch as Chief Guide, and two daughters are accompanying the Chief Scout. They are at present on their way east from England, making calls on Scout and Guide units in some of the 71 countries where these organizations are promoting their ideals of good citizenship among youth. International in scope, the twin associations know no race or color, and are spread all the way across every sea and touched nearly every land. Their membership is in hundreds of thousands.

Lord Baden-Powell is a distinguished British soldier of the Boer war, 1899-1902. In those days he was known as "B.P." and hailed the "hero of Mafeking." As a lieutenant-colonel, he commanded the defending force of 1,000 irregular troops when the little town of corrugated buildings in the centre of Bechuanaland was besieged and cut off from food and water supplies for seven months by a much larger and better equipped force. It is recorded B.P.'s fertility of invention in checkmating the attacking forces never failed.

The high spirits with which he conducted the defence were infectious. He was always able to rally his men, and he has been known to attack and bring inspiration to the stricken towns people. Eventually a relieving force, including guns of "C" Battery, Royal Canadian Artillery, bored through the enemy lines and raised the siege.

Baden-Powell received quick promotion and retired from the British army in 1910 as Lieut.-General Sir Robert Baden-Powell. He has seen service in India and Afghanistan as well as South Africa. He is a sculptor of note and author of several books, largely on scouting and boy training. He was married in 1912, when 55 years of age, to Miss Olive Soames, who as Lady Baden-Powell has taken a leading part in the development of the Girl Guides.

Had Unusual Vacation

Anbergis King Patrolled Desolate Beach For Thirty Years

Adam Adamson, known as the Ambergis King and believed to have one of the most unusual vacations in the world, has died on Stewart Island, the loneliest spot in New Zealand. He was born in the Shetland Islands, became a sailor, but finally settled on the spot of land in Mason's Bay to hunt for the treasure which comes from whales of the Polar Seas and eventually is washed ashore. On the desolate beach which Adamson patrolled for more than 30 years the Antarctic currents would sometimes wash up the carcasses of these creatures. He waited for them and at times made rich finds. He never became rich but he found enough to make a living and he asked no more.

Eyestrain Is Destructive

Overwork "Burns Out" Optical Nerves And Spas Energy

The destructive result of eyestrain is explained on the grounds that six of the twelve sets of nerves in the head lead to the eyes. Overwork of these delicate nerves not only spurs the energy available for other nerves, but "burns out" the optical nerves and renders ineffective the eyes, one of the principal channels of knowledge. Sportsmen, hikers and motorists who face the dazzling sunlight without the protection of colored glasses often experience eyestrain and place themselves "on the spot" without realizing they are doing so.

VICKS PLAN FOR BETTER CONTROL OF COLDS

THE TENDERFOOT

By GEORGE B. RODNEY

Author of "The Coronado Trail," "The Canyon Trail," Etc.

SYNOPSIS

"You've fallen heir to a half-share in plenty of trouble," the lawyer told Gerald Keene. "The Broken Spur has been systematically looting the ranch, and old Joe Cart, your partner, is drinker himself into ruin."

But Keene decided to go see what was happening for himself—not as Gerald Keene, the Broken Spur has been systematically looting the ranch, and old Joe Cart, your partner, is drinker himself into ruin."

Dad Kane, desert rat and luckless prospector till now is returning to tell Dustin and Spike Goddard, owners of the Broken Spur ranch, who had grubstaked him, of his discovery of a rich gold mine, and shows samples of the ore. He sees Broken Spur men rustling Hour-glass cattle and protests against it.

Spike Goddard and Sam Dustin, fearing the old prospector may tell others the things he has seen as to the branding of Cart's cattle, plot to get him to show them the location of the mine and then to kill him.

Gerald Keene, dressed in rabelous cowboy costume, arrived at the Broken-glass ranch and is hired as a cowboy by Joe Cart. The innervation of the tenderfoot is successful, and he is accepted as such by the other cowboys of the business.

Proof of Dustin's cattle stealing activities was accidentally discovered by Stone, who accompanied by Edith Cart was riding fence, a long way from the Hour-glass ranch house. Dustin unexpectedly comes along and seeing them, stone and Edith. He mentions the Soda Springs dispute could be settled by marrying him, and Edith refuses his proposal with remarks that make Dustin furious. He insults Stone, who promptly throws him into a pool of water.

(Now Go On With The Story)

It happened quickly! One of the men flung his rope and missed. The calf doubled back, ducked under the horse's head and was promptly jerked to earth as the second rider bull-dogged him. In less than a minute that calf, struggling and bawling, lay inert while both men bent over him.

Stone quietly backed his horse down the slope and stood watching the two men. Suddenly he raised his head and listened. Clear and distinct, a sound that he knew well came to his ears, the anxious lowing of a cow for her calf. Next to the night howl of a lobo that is the most desolate sound in Nature and which thrills to the heart of him who hears it. The next moment a half-crazed cow broke from the scrub and, head down and tail switching, dashed at the two dismounted men.

What followed just missed pure comedy. Those men dodged sideways; one fell in his tracks and the other tumbled over him. The next moment one was sitting astride the calf's head with his own head bent low across the calf whose bawling rose to heaven.

Stone dodged behind a line of boulders that gave cover to the very foot of the hill. The next minute he pulled his holster forward and ran forward into the open. The first warning they had of his approach came in his sharp-whispered summons: "Hands up, you damned Abyssinians! . . ." He dropped his gun in line with the man sitting on the calf's neck. "Come out o' that . . . both of you."

There was no resisting his request. Both men dismounted to his feet; both were breathless and disheveled and one had a bloody mouth. Stone gave a casual glance at the calf. Its left ear was nearly chewed off and a great chunk had been bitten from the upper edge.

"Roeder!" Gnaiver. . . That is a term of reproach among Spanish-speaking people where party-stricken cattle thieves, lacking other means of branding calves, bite the ear-mark on the calves. It is rare . . . and still more rarely appreciated. Stone spat out the word. His new friends on the Hour-glass would not have known him. A man who would bite an ear-mark on a stolen calf was too low for human use.

"You damned thieves! You're Broken Spur men, of course. . . What's your name?"

The man's hand came halfway down. They went promptly up again at a swift movement of Stone's six-gun.

"Name o' Gray," he growled. "What's it to you?"

"Maybe nothin'. It depends on who pays me. . ."

Gray's eyes lit somberly but he kept his hands up. "What's the ear-mark of the Broken Spur?" asked Stone.

"Can't you see?" demanded Gray sourly. "It's one ear cropped, the other under-bit . . . like I just done."

He waved a dirty paw at the calf's bleeding ear, but promptly raised it again at a motion from Stone's gun.

"How many've you marked to-day?"

"None o' your damned business. What you aimin' to do about it?"

"I'll try to show you. I wonder what Sam Dustin'll have to say about this. . . Usin' his outfit to rustle cattle."

"Huh. Dustin's the man what give the orders. D'you reckon we'd git a wagon and supplies an' an nigger driver from the Broken Spur if we wasn't workin' under orders? Look a-here, stranger. You're just a duffer workin' for the Hour-glass. It's worth two hundred caps to you to pull yore freight into Mexico."

"I'm on the pay roll of the Hour-glass till some one makes it worth my while to change," said Stone quietly.

The two men stared wordlessly at each other and a red light showed in Kane's eyes.

"You want to see Dustin," he said shrewdly. "Dustin does all the hirin' an' firin'. Him an' Spike Goddard've just took another man on. They've added prospectin' to ranchin'."

Gray tried to shut him up, but Corse went on.

"I wish to God I was a o' desert rat what kin git men to hang an' an' firin' fer 'em without workin' to pay fer 'em. . . What you aimin' to do now?" he demanded as Stone whipped a knife from his pocket, opened it with a quick flick of his hand and flung it at Gray's feet.

"You two good-sides, mesquite tree," he said. "An' see to it they're big ones. This gun's set on a hair trigger. . . Better be quick."

Wonderingly, with one eye on the gun, Corse cut two thick branches from a neighboring clump, flung them at Stone's feet and stood breathing heavily.

"That's the stuff. Now cut off the loose branches till leave all the horns on 'em."

When the trimming was done to his entire satisfaction, Stone straightened up; his gun, that seemed to hang listlessly in his hand, stiffened and the muzzle seemed to cover both men.

Now each of you take one of those branches. . .

They gaped at him uncomprehendingly but at a suggestive raising of the pistol hand they fairly started at the mesquite scrub. Stone seated himself on a boulder and his eyes narrowed into points of gray light that seemed to emit sparks.

"We ain't had one hell of a time lately on the Hour-glass of late," he said reflectively. "It peema like it's only fair to make a man clean up his own mess. I just caught you two men red-handed markin' cattle that don't belong to the Broken Spur. . . You say your name's Corse?"

The man nodded at a quiescence.

"And yours is Gray? Fine. Take those sticks and start in on each other. Better dog each other for stealin' than go to jail. If you haven't started floggin' each other by the time I count three, I'm pointin' to some plain an' fancy shootin' . . . Get me?"

It was so far from clear that they giggled at each other. Then Corse, thinking he saw a chance, snatched wildly at his gun. His hand had not reached his holster when a quick, red flash jetted from Stone's hand and Corse emitted a shrill shout.

"You . . . you damned murderer," he shouted. "You've shot me. . ."

His hand fumbled at the side of his head and came away filled with blood.

"Ear-mark," quoth Stone imperiously. "I underbit one ear. That's the Broken Spur mark, you say. Next shot'll mark the other ear. You'd better get to work with those sticks. I've counted two. . ."

In a fine frenzy Corse snatched the withe and cut viciously at Gray's face. The stick brought blood from his eye to his mouth and the next moment Gray, with a frenzied howl, was on Corse with upraised stick.

In and out, writing about each other, cursing, almost foaming at the mouth, each man made more furiously angry by his friend's howls than by Stone's cheering or by his threatening gun, they flogged and struck. Corse's face was a mask of blood and sweat; Gray was rocking on his feet and both men were totally exhausted. They circled and panted breathlessly and only a blow or two occasionally got home as Stone watched them carefully.

"Time," he said shortly. "That's enough. You remember each other now. Remember, Honesty's the best policy." You, Corse. . . Stand still!

He snatched the guns from both men. They had not dared try to draw them and now it was too late. He threw them far into the bush.

"You can go now. . . Tell Dustin just what happened. Tell him, too, that he's got the same dose waitin' for him the first chance I get. He's had it comin' for a long time now. He'll get his yet. Get on with you."

They slunk off to their horses, caught them up and mounted and joined the wagon at a gallop. Stone saw them talking vaguely to the driver; then the wagon whirled about and jogged off down the valley.

"It's a cinch that somebody'll talk," he muttered. "That driver saw it all. . . Now what the devil is that?"

He bent over the trampled spot where Gray and Corse had flogged each other and swiftly retrieved a little red notebook that had been trampled underfoot by the milling men. It was just a cheap little notebook backed with imitation red leather and he flipped its pages open idly enough.

"Looks like the plot thickens," he muttered. "I wonder what this is. . ."

He had expected to find the book filled with usual addresses of girls in the neighboring towns or with accounts of debts. To his surprise the first page bore the legend in purple pencil:

D. Kane his book

That same page bore a list of camp supplies with weights and measures to facilitate quick packing on uneasy burros. The second page was a price list of beans and bacon. Coffee and sugar and powder, the entry read, every item that a prospector could use was listed there. Then came an item that made Stone stare at it with puzzled eyes. It read:

"Mem. One half to Dustin if he plies fare but don't show him where it is till he comes across."

Then followed a list of notes, main-

A BARBER WHO HAD RHEUMATISM

Tells How He Carried On

A barber who had been "a martyr to rheumatism" writes—

"I have been a martyr to rheumatism for some ten years. For five years I was so affected that it was with the greatest difficulty I was able to carry on my business. I may say I am a barber by trade. After having tried numerous remedies, I was finally advised to try Kruschen. I am pleased to say that after having used Kruschen for some twelve months, I am now free from aches and pains that I have been for some ten years. In fact, I consider I am rid of rheumatism, thanks to Kruschen Salts."—W.M.

Two of the ingredients of Kruschen Salts are the most effective solvents of uric acid known to medical science. They swiftly melt the sharp edges of the painful crystals, then convert them into a harmless solution. Other ingredients of these Salts have a stimulating effect upon the kidneys and assist them to expel the dissolved uric acid through the natural channels.

ly illegible, but that he finally deciphered:

Red Water canon seven one to white hich. . . To Stinking Water three two to seven can. . .

"It's enough to puzzle a mind reader," quoth Stone. "I reckon I'd better see old man Corse about this. . . Or Dustin."

CHAPTER VII.

Duro Stone knew well the character of the enemy he had made. He felt reasonably sure that neither Gray nor Corse would tell truthfully what took place that day on the range, but he also remembered that the negro driver of the wagon saw it all. Least he should forget the kind of man Dustin was, Frank Corse reminded him cryptically. He knew nothing of that last encounter, but he remembered the incident at Soda Springs.

"He'll shoot you in the back if he gets a chance," he said. "I don't overlook the man who shows him up before women. You look out."

Corse, sitting in the sun on the porch of the ranch-house, watched Stone mending a lariar from the hondo had pulled loose. He saw the lean fingers feel the "whang" about the metal hondo; he saw Stone's brow wrinkle a moment in perplexity; then the ready knife came out, the worn piece of whang was cut away and before Corse was even aware of the low-voiced oath that sprang from his lips, Stone had spliced the lariar and the rope was as good as new. Corse stepped over to him and laid a hand on his shoulder.

"You listen to me, Stone," he said. "I don't care a tinker's dam if you're the man who plays the game with us I'm goin' to see that you git a square deal. I don't know who you are but I know damned well who you ain't. You ain't any amateur cow-puncher like you want us to believe. What's the game? Let me tell you something. If you aim to keep your past hid, don't ever splay no more whang with the Apache twist. Anybody who's ever seen that 'twist has punched cattle in the White Mountain country."

Stone laughed and looked silly; then he laughed amiably.

"I've got nothin' to hide that I'm ashamed of," he said. "I never shot a man nor robbed a bank. But for reasons that I'm not ready to give just yet, I'm tradin' on a new future. As long as I do my work am I a fixture on the Hour-glass?"

Corse smote him a blow on the shoulder that hurt.

"As long as I'm hos you're fixed," he said. "What you did for Edith at Soda Springs has fixed you for keeps with us, Stone. But . . . well . . . when you get ready to talk, talk to me. . ."

"All right. I'll start right now. . . Stone took him at his word. "You know that man Dustin?"

"Like a prairie dog knows a rattler. Why?"

"Remember the last time I rode the line of the West fence?"

"Uh-huh. Go on. . ."

"I found two of the Broken Spur men. Gray and Corse, with a wagon up there. They were writin' on a skin book with a hot pen. . . I caught 'em ear-markin' a calf that belonged to the Hour-glass."

Little Help For This Week

"These things have I spoken unto you that in me ye might have peace. In the world ye shall have tribulation, but be of good cheer, I have overcome the world." John 16:33.

O Thou the primal fount of life and peace, Who shedst Thy breathing

In me command that pain and conflict cease, And unto music every jarring sound.

Accustom yourself to unreasonableness and injustice. Abide in peace in the presence of God who sees all the evils more clearly than you do, and who permits them to be content with doing with calmness the little which depends upon yourself, and let all else be to you as if it were not. It is rare when instinct or sleight patiently borne do not leave the heart at the close of the day filled with marvelous joy and peace.

Physicians Achieve Success

Believe Serum Developed To Prevent Tuberculosis

A cautious statement by Governor Ed. C. Johnston indicated that Denver physicians have achieved success in medical science's long struggle to develop a serum to prevent tuberculosis.

The governor said he expects the physicians to ask soon for pardons for Mike Schmidt and Carl Erickson, Colorado convicts who risked their lives on the promise of freedom if they permitted themselves to be inoculated with thousands of live tubercular bacilli after they were given the serum.

The governor said he has been informed the bacilli failed to produce the disease in the convicts, indicating they were immunized by the serum. The convicts were the first human beings upon whom the serum was tested and physicians said the experiments might result in death.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

BRAVERY

Two kinds of valiant folk there are, And which is stronger you can know, The gallant lad who goes to war, The fearless maid who hides him go?

O, bravery is a stirring thing, When banners, drums and marching feet, Go past, while patriots' voices sing Along the crowded street!

But bravery can be lonely, too, Within a quiet house somewhere, When silence has dwindled to a few And aken weights the air.

Which is the braver, who can say, The smiling soldier or the lass Who by his hearth alone must stay And hear the eager legions pass?

Remember that the quotation is Let joy be unconfined, not "unrestrained."

USE RADIO TO KILL GERMS AND INSECTS

From the University of Pittsburgh, Pa., comes the news that Dr. J. S. Oartel and E. Alfred Wolf are making tests in which they find high-frequency radio waves to be more than 25 per cent effective in killing germs that cause decay in teeth.

In a laboratory at New Brunswick, N.J., the same radio waves as those carrying entertainment, except as regards length, are now being sent through the ether at the rate of three million plus per second, to carry certain death to any insect in their path. Scientists expect these tests to result eventually in freeing agriculture from its constant warfare against insects.

These discoveries prove that the Aztecs were addicted to flying many centuries ago.

Albert F. Short injured his leg last week while playing Badminton, which has laid him off from office duty for some days.

Mr. J. D. Moir of Little Woody, Sask., arrived to spend Christmas holidays with his daughter, Mrs. H. T. Halliwell.

The post office is indeed a busy place, but Postmaster Graham maintains his affable smile no matter how harassed customers may be who wish to get last minute parcels a few seconds before mail closing time.

Andrew H. McLeod went to Leth bridge yesterday to visit his son, who has been seriously ill.

Maureen Cooke is spending a few days with friends at Lethbridge. Mrs. Holstead and Audrey left on Tuesday to spend Christmas at Spring Point.

Dr. Borden has been off duty for some days through illness.

The Fascination of Christmas

Christmas Map Stamp

THE time draws near the birth of Christ." All hearts are sensitive with sympathy. It is the one festival of the year that overrides every barrier and sweeps all humanity into its glow and charm. There are no Scrooges left today—Charles Dickens made that type of person so melancholy and lonely that no one desires to stand out so tragically from the happy celebration. It is not difficult to understand the fascination of the day. The happiness is so beautiful and hearty, the atmosphere so radiant and warm that everybody wants to share in it. It is making others happy that constitutes the attraction of Christmas. There is no selfishness in it—the thought everywhere is for others. Watch the crowd go hurrying by, each one laden with parcels to cheer and make radiant the day for others.

Take a peep into the places of "Christmas Cheer" and note the bundles of good things being prepared for the lonely and the stranger. The whole world is happy—there are no differences or dissimiles here. People work together without a thought as to social and credal cleavages. There are no dividing gulfs at Christmas—love is the cement that binds all the elements together. How good it is to have at least one day in the year when divisions are forgotten and the fundamental unity of humanity is the dominant note!

A little girl at bedtime, was being comforted in her loneliness at night by the assurance that God was always with her. "Yes, mother," she replied, "but I want a flesh God." And so does all humanity! That has been the eternal cry of the human heart. God in Heaven was too remote. His majestic Power and awful Holiness produced awe and reverence but could hardly inspire love. He must draw near in fellowship with humanity. Only by taking on flesh and dwelling with men could He really command affection and confidence. Christmas is the time when "the Word was made flesh and dwelt among us." Heaven is brought close to earth. The angels are singing over the fields and the star sheds its light over the town.

Everywhere it is true that ideas and ideals must become incarnated before they can have influence with the sons of men. Music must be "made flesh" by the art of the singer before it can touch human hearts. Thought is expressed in the language of the lips ere it can have any influence. Once an orator was described as "eloquence made flesh." God can best be made known in human personality. That is the beautiful Christmas truth and explains its universal appeal. And where is there humanity so tender and spotless, so unspoiled and beautiful, as in a little child? The Babe is the epitome of all loveliness and goodness. Its little hand pulls at the heart. Its very helplessness summons our strength, its innocence commands our admiration. The ancient prophecy summed it all up in the golden sentence: "A little child shall lead them."

Christmas is a day of joy. That increases its appeal, for the great hunger of humanity is for happiness. "I bring you glad tidings of great joy," sang the angel. The world needs that message, for in recent days there has not been too much joy. The laughter has died in human hearts and the songs have not been sung. It will be good, then, to hear the joy bells ringing at Christmas time and to listen to the carols outside the window. "Let joy be unconfined"—let it spill over into shadowed homes, find its way down dark alleys and pour its throbbing notes into every aching heart. There must be no grudging or careful economy at Christmas! "God so loved the world that He gave His only-begotten Son"—that must be the standard and measure of giving, a brimming, overflowing surrender of love in the ministry of joy.

One more note needs to be added to make the festival complete. It is the casting out of fear. That was the original word of the angelic message: "Fear not." Just now the world seems engulfed with fear. Nations sleep on the borders of terror. Individuals are faced with intolerable anxieties. Let this season be free of fear. Help to cast it out of the lives of others. Faith is the one thing that can do it. Christmas can only be properly kept when hearts are full of confidence and minds are freed of fear. When "peace on earth" comes, all the black dreads are abolished. Unity, joy, love, faith, these are the essential notes of "A Happy Christmas."

A UNIQUE commemorative postage stamp was the Canadian Christmas Stamp of 1898.

Thirty years previously, in 1868, the rate of postage on letters in Canada was reduced from five cents to three cents. During this time the rate for post cards was one cent between post offices in Canada, and also when addressed to United States points. On this account post cards were used to a very great extent, for private and also a certain amount of commercial correspondence.

It was argued at Ottawa that if the rate was reduced from three to two cents, that a much larger revenue would be derived, due to the increased use of the letter rate, and that many would cease to use the one cent postcard. This claim later proved to be correct.

Before the rate on Canadian correspondence was carried into effect, the idea was born, "if for Canada, why not for the Empire?" Negotiations were entered into, and as a result "Penny Postage" was obtained between all places in the British Empire, whereas formerly the rate was five cents.

Such a reduction in the rate of postage was an historic occasion, quite worthy of special recognition. Sir William Mulock was then postmaster general, and the stamp which was issued was of his design.

Few postage stamps have received as much public comment as that which greeted the appearance of the Canadian Christmas stamp of 1898.

The festive season was chosen to celebrate the reduced rate, and in the rush of the Christmas activities, one would almost have thought the appearance of the stamp would have passed unnoticed.

The first criticism was to the spelling of the word "Christmas" as "Xmas." The latter spelling is making use of the Greek letter "X" which stands for our "CH," and which was the symbolic letter for the name of Christ.

Then the phrase, "We hold a vaster Empire than has been," aroused comment. The statement was true, but some thought it boastful, and others objected to the wording "than has been."

It will be noted that the map is not presented in the form of two globes, which is the familiar one to most people, in which the meridians converge at the poles. This usual method of presentation has the effect of making countries above or below the equator seem smaller in comparison, than they really are. As a result Canada was thought by some to have "spread" itself, and to give more space or area on the stamp than she really possessed. The map, however, was approximately correct.

The Standard catalogue lists this stamp as having the oceans in two colors, namely "lavender" and "blue." This has occasioned some confusion. In our opinion, what is called "lavender" would be much better listed as "pale blue"—and what is termed "blue" is in our opinion decidedly a green.

In the printing process, the ocean colors were allowed to run "dry," the effect being that the shades "paled" from deep to pale. One may easily find specimens which apparently have no coloring at all on the oceans.

The "Canada First" album lists these stamps with oceans printed in pale blue and green, and also provides a space for one of the very faint shades of each color.

Quite frequently specimens are found in which the oceans may be said to have had a storm, for the color is a muddy brown. This has been caused by oxidation, and such stamps are spoiled.

Eating A Church

The good old-fashioned Christmas produces hearty appetites—and not only among human beings. One of the strangest items of Yuletide news comes from an Alpine village, where, it was reported, thousands of famished rats had "invaded a garage and devoured a motor-car, leaving only the iron framework."

But the record for strange meals is surely held by the dogs who ate a church. Somewhere in the North, pious Eskimos built a church with a frame of walrus ribs, covered with walrus hides.

It was a nice church, but between morning and evening service one Sunday it was torn to pieces and devoured by a pack of hungry dogs.

Gifts!

Practical presents are pleasant, but the real gifts are the love and happiness one bestows at Christmas.
